WHY CHOOSE BOO?

Team Boo delivers world class executive learning solutions. Our coaching, mentoring and leadership programmes have helped thousands of bosses be better bosses.

THERE'S MORE ...

The work we do goes beyond increasing the knowledge and skills of individuals alone. Each of our graduates goes on to contribute to the culture of coaching and mentoring which is changing the world, one workplace at a time.

THERE'S MORE ...

At Boo we put wellbeing at the centre of all we do. When you join one of our programmes you will be supported and cared for. Afterwards you will become one of our treasured alumni community.

AND FINALLY...

For every day that we are commissioned to deliver, we bank an hour to give back to the community. When you join one of our programmes, you are part of creating that social value.

LEARNER EXPERIENCES

“Changing the world, one workplace at a time”

“The coaching course not only helped me to be a coach (a role that’s so important to me) but also helped me to understand the importance of looking after myself, listening, and allowing myself time.”

“Achieving accreditation in a wide range of qualifications”

“Team Boo create a genuine and empathic environment to learn with lots of laughter and energy. Expect curious questions, peer sharing and self reflection. The journey has been insightful and really helped shape my development. I have loved every minute and would highly recommended to anyone in a leadership role. I can’t speak highly enough of this team!”

“The energy that Team Boo have is fantastic. They are down-to-earth but with such a passion that you can’t help but come away with a curiosity you want to learn more.”

“Enabling
participants to grow and develop”

SARAH'S LEARNING EXPERIENCE

2019 graduate Sarah Geere explains the benefits of attending our Level 5 open programme.

Sarah wasn't specifically looking to complete a coaching and mentoring qualification, but when one of our flyers made its way into a leadership meeting, it piqued her interest.

"I'd already heard of coaching as I'd done a Masters Degree in Leadership, and it resonated with my background as an occupational therapist because we use those skills indirectly with patients. Coaching and mentoring, as a leadership development tool, can change culture in a staggered way. It's about achieving that shift through lived experience and not 'oh the managers have been on a course again....'"

Sarah thinks that attending an open programme with attendees from varied backgrounds was a strong selling point and the best choice for her. these were her three highlights:

1. THE CONFIDENCE TO HONE COACHING SKILLS IN A NEUTRAL ENVIRONMENT, WITHOUT CONFLICT OF INTEREST OR LOSING SIGHT OF THE BIGGER PICTURE

"That fact that my coachees weren't from the same organisation was great because it gave me the confidence that I was actually relying on my coaching practice and not my subject experience or my existing knowledge about them instead."

2. THE DEVELOPMENT OF A COACHING COMMUNITY

"The cross-organisational aspect was a real positive for me. There was a good mix of organisations and they became a network."

3. TEAM BOO'S APPROACH

"I loved the course. The energy that Team Boo have is fantastic. They are down to earth but with such a passion that you can't help but come away with a curiosity, you want to learn more..."

"I've realised I am a visual coach. I have a real affinity for sticky notes and coloured pens, and these are some of the main tools that I use in my practice. This really helped it click for me."

In a statement that echoes what many of our participants say, Sarah explained that her learning has had positive knock-on effects beyond her professional life.

"Coaching, in particular, is my go-to tool. My family joke about how I directly use coaching questions at home. Not only that, but this approach seems to have rubbed off on them too. They'll say to me 'What would your kind self say?'"
